SCHOOL ENDS... SUMMER BEGINS... A BOY AND HIS DOG

By CLIFTON ABBOTT
When King—a ruddy mongrel with a pale yellow eye and a cringing fear of adults instilled by many a thrown rock—thinks of his 8-year-old master, Kenny Quihuis, something happens to the dog's basic metabolism.
When Kenny is indoors where King isn't allowed, the dog is content to crouch in a bit of shade, tongue lolling, and pant happily for hours, disregarding all passing humans and all other dogs. His only thought is of Kenny and of the joyous moment to come when they'll be (explosively) reunited.

Throughout the long school year this hypnotic attraction the boy holds for the dog has produced a heart-warming scene daily among residents and passers-by along East Broadway in the vicinity of Miles School.

Mornings—leaping, frisking, running, freezing motionless and sniffing—King escorts Kenny to school. There he squats on his haunches on the sidewalk before the gate and sometimes waits through the long hours until recess and a short frolic with the boy.

At other times King will pad disconsolately home—and should he take a shortcut and pause in a yard and sniff at a rosebush to puzzle out some mysterious problem known only to dogs, an old man is likely to shy a rock at him and in a harsh voice wishfully consign King to the eternal fires.

Home, King loafs about the yard until—moments before recess or lunch period—he races back to school with an instinct truer than any timepiece.
Motorists driving to and from work and those who live in the neighborhood have become accustomed to King's familiar figure waiting in front of the school. The friendly attitude of the Miles School janitor over the past nine months has even emboldened the dog to come just inside the gate and stretch out on the lawn in the shade of a mulberry tree while he waits for Kenny.

Yesterday afternoon when the bell rang to end the schoolday,

Kenny, comfortable in his Levis, sauntered out the door. And King, as usual, came electrically to life. Alert, every muscle suddenly charged with energy and with an unwavering eye on Kenny, King was ready for whatever offered. The pumping of his tail indicated the storm of ecstasy bubbling about inside.

"Hello, King boy," Kenny said and the pair went homeward.
For King it was just another day. But for Kenny it was the end of the school year and three months of nothing to do but play; a boy and his dog and a long, exciting summer stretching endlessly ahead.

Rebels Kill 12 Frenchmen Woman Among Victims In Algerian Outburst

ALGIERS, Algeria—(AP)—Algerian rebels slashed the throats of 12 French employes of a highway construction company in eastern Algeria today, official sources said. Among the dead was one woman.

The town was Oumach, about 150 miles south of Constantine. It is on the outskirts of the Aurès Mountain region where the Algerian rebellion flared more than 1½ years ago.

The new loss of French civilians came on the heels of widespread trouble in North Africa from Tunis on the east to Morocco on the west.

TENSION IN Morocco heightened, Gen. Gabriel Burgund, commander of French troops there, issued an angry answer to critics of the conduct of his forces. In Paris, Foreign Office officials said he would be recalled, but this was denied at the War Ministry.

After the slayings at Oumach, informants said, the rebels carried off about 20 Arab residents. Two children were saved.

It was the third large-scale attack on Frenchmen in the past 10 days.

A slaughter of nearly 20 French farmers in western Algeria was followed last week by the ambushing of a patrol of French recruits freshly put in uniform. Eighteen were killed in the ambush, one was rescued, but two are still missing.

THIS NEW REBEL outburst came in the face of growing trouble in Paris over the policy pursued by Premier Guy Mollet.

He has scheduled a debate on North Africa for next Thursday demanding approval of his efforts to restore peace in Algeria with a strong hand and heavy reinforcements of troops before negotiating a new French-Algerian settlement.

In Paris demonstrations, said to be Communist-inspired, broke out again last night against sending some 200 demonstrators to Algeria.

SOME 200 demonstrators swarmed on to the tracks at Brignoud Station, near Grenoble in the foothills of the French Alps, and stopped a train carrying reservists.

An hour later, the tracks were still blocked and the Geneva-Mediterranean express had to be diverted over another route.

Smaller incidents occurred at several villages in the same area.

Layoffs Cited At Douglas

LONG BEACH, Calif.—(AP)—Union employes at the Douglas Aircraft Co. plant here have telegraphed President Eisenhower asking him to look into the company's employment situation.

The wire, dispatched yesterday by Local 148 of the United Auto Workers, declared that more than 3,000 employes have been laid off or down graded since last Jan. 1. Of these, the telegram continued, 2,000 skilled workers have been laid off completely.

Chrysler Corp. said 13,500 employes would work only Monday and Tuesday next week. The shutdowns will affect all Plymouth plants and most of the firm's body-making plants.

Only yesterday, the Michigan employment security commission reported the state's unemployed stood at 230,000, with 128,000 of them in auto-making Detroit.

The UAW's GM council voted unanimously in Detroit yesterday for "a substantial reduction in the work week with full 40 hours pay" to end what it described as the "morale-breaking short work weeks."

Educators Laud Ike's Proposal Point Four Plan Supported

GETTYSBURG, Pa.—(AP)—American educators today praised President Eisenhower's proposed intellectual Point Four program and pledged their support.

Both the Giant Ford Foundation and the Carnegie Corp. pointed out that they already are attempting to conduct such a program within their resources.

Chancellor Robert B. House of the University of North Carolina flatly called the proposal a "good one."

THE PRESIDENT proposed yesterday in a speech at Baylor University that American universities and foundations should unite in helping lagging nations develop their science and technology.

The President flew to Waco, Tex., at breakfast time to make the speech.

He returned last night and flew here to spend a quiet week-end at his farm. The only item on his schedule was a round of golf this morning and he was expected to return to Washington about noon Monday.

A BRIEF meeting between Eisenhower and his Texas Democratic supporters did not include any discussion of politics. National Committeeman Jack Porter said, "It was purely a social gathering, contrary to speculation," Porter said.

Eisenhower shook hands at the airport with Texas Gov. Allan Shivers, who led the state into the Eisenhower column in 1952, but Shivers did not attend the meeting, after the speech.

John W. Gardner, president of the Carnegie Corp., said the President's plan "deserves the most serious attention and consideration."

A FORD Foundation spokesman pointed out that the foundation has been engaged in an educational aid program in a score of foreign nations for six years.

Gutierrez Hearing Set On Release

FLORENCE—(AP)—Superior Court Judge W. C. Truman today set June 20 for a hearing on a petition by Steven Reyes Gutierrez, narcotics offender from Tucson who is seeking a release from Arizona State Prison.

Gutierrez, who was convicted of possession of narcotics last November in Pima County Superior Court, asked for a writ of habeas corpus on the grounds that the statute under which he was sent to prison "leaves too much to discretion on the part of the judge."

His petition said the offense could be declared either a felony or a misdemeanor and claimed he was sentenced under "arbitrary and capricious" circumstances.

Gutierrez was convicted in connection with the narcotics death of Mrs. Armida Soto in Tucson on Aug. 1, 1955. The woman died after an overdose of heroine was administered in a motel unit at Ingram's Court on South 6th avenue.

HER BODY was found at 281 W. 32nd St. in an alleyway. Gutierrez was sentenced to serve 9 to 12 years in prison after his conviction.

The 20-year-old convict is from Fresno, Calif.

FLIER FINDS IT'S SAFER IN ALASKA

An Alaskan pilot finally ran out of luck and crashed his amphibian plane a mile from Benson today.

John C. Coray, 30, a teacher from Port Alsworth, Alaska, climbed out of the destroyed plane unhurt. Taking a bus to Tucson from where he planned to fly by airline back home, he said, "I'm going back to Alaska where it's safe."

Things hadn't gone well for Coray since he picked up the pusher-type Republic SeaBee plane in Wichita on Thursday.

He decided to go back home by way of Los Angeles, but had two forced landings before getting to Benson.

"I sat down in some farmer's wheat field in the Midwest," Coray said today. "Then I sat down at the Air Force Base at Clovis, N.M. They were ready to shoot me."

Yesterday, Coray landed at Benson, this time because of trouble with the gas gauge.

This morning at 4:45 Coray took off again, lost power, clipped the main power line into Benson and set the plane down in the mesquite.

"The plane was pretty well washed up," Sam Player, owner of the San Pedro Valley News said.

Coray said, "Brother they can have that airplane. No more of them for me." The plane was not insured.

Tucsonians Badly Hurt In Crash

Two Tucsonians are in "poor" condition at Pima County Hospital today after they were injured by being thrown from their rolling automobile on the Nogales Highway early today.

Salvador F. Porras, 28, of 534 N. 7th Ave., owner of the automobile, was thrown onto a barbed wire fence when the auto rolled three times. The wrecked auto came to rest on top of him as he lay on the fence.

He suffered internal injuries and cuts.

Rolando O. Loya, 17, of 1019 W. Delaware St., suffered possible fractures of the skull and hip.

Arizona Highway Patrol officials said the auto was headed north at a high rate of speed when it ran off the left side of the road four miles north of Kinsley's ranch.

Reds Seek Key Cities

ROME—(AP)—Police guarded against new riots today on the eve of nationwide local elections in which the Communists hoped to gain control of key Italian cities.

Fascists yearning for the empire hey-day of Mussolini sparked clashes with police in Rome and Milan last night in the dying hours of an otherwise lack-luster campaign. Several persons were injured, and at least 16 rioters were arrested.

No electioneering was permitted today.

THIRTY MILLION Italians are eligible to vote tomorrow and Monday for 7,141 municipal and 79 provincial councils. It is the first big test of Western opinion since Moscow launched its down-with-Stalin movement.

Communists were notably absent from the few incidents which marred the quietest election campaign since the war although this strategic nation has the biggest Red party outside the Iron Curtain.

In a new approach the Communists put on their best behavior in an attempt to lull Democratic voters into the belief the Reds no longer were a menace.

VOTER APATHY was the main concern of the governing Christian Democratic party members and their allies. They feared a small turnout would help the left and that gains for the leftists at the local level might create chaos in city councils.

The outcome was unpredictable in such major cities as Genoa, Turin, Bologna, Venice, Milan and Rome itself.

In last night's demonstration, some 15,000 Fascist youths attended a mass rally in front of Rome's ancient Colosseum and then crashed through police lines into Piazza Venezia.

Shouting the forgotten slogans of Mussolini's regime, the Fascists hurled flaming torches at the police sent to disperse them. They also tossed torches at a Christian Democratic bus, but all passengers escaped injury.

Police charged the demonstrators with night sticks, injuring several. Ten Fascists were arrested. Six were released this morning and four detained.

The Senate bill would authorize a $17 billion federal-state highway construction program. For the interstate system, the authorizations would run over 13 years. For the other three systems, they would extend for only five years.

The House has passed a bill calling for a $5½ billion program to last for 13 years.

MONDAY Highway Bill Up In Senate

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The Senate will consider Monday a bill to authorize a massive highway improvement program and to provide billions of dollars in new taxes to pay for the construction.

Senate Democratic Leader Lyndon B. Johnson said yesterday he will push for a final vote by Tuesday night.

Johnson scheduled floor debate after the senate finance committee finished work on the bill. In its final form, the bill contains a "pay-as-you-build" proviso applying only to work on the 40,000-mile interstate highway system.

This system will take most of the money under the program. The committee modified an earlier action which would have applied the restriction also to primary, urban and farm-to-market roads.

This section would restrict work in any year of the projected 13-year program to the amount available from highway user taxes, such as those on gasoline, tires and trucks.
